Course Overview:

In recent years, the United States and the world has seen countless numbers of individuals become involved in violent extremist activities, with particular activity by radicalized American residents and or citizens inspired by religious ideology. Violent extremism is not confined to any single ideology, but it is a growing global threat posed by violent criminal extremists and it is a preeminent threat to any nation. It is imperative for all public safety dispatchers to be appropriately trained in understanding and detecting ideologically motivated criminal behavior in their communities as call takers.
